

paintless dent removal

(PDR)

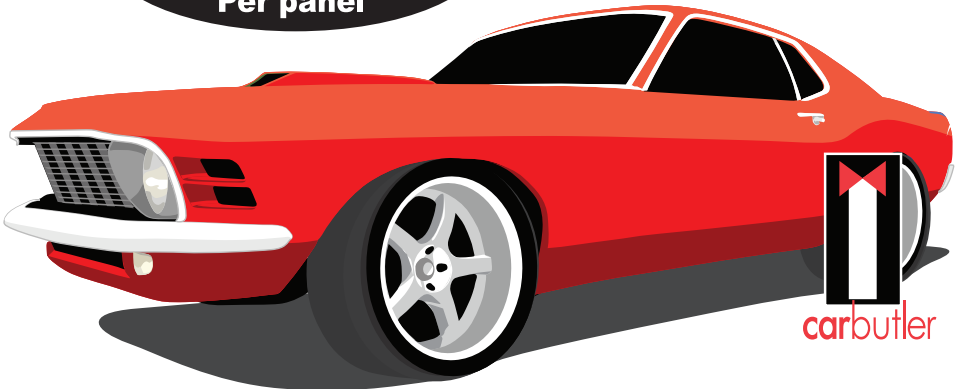

Ever walk out to your car only to discover that it has been marred with a new dimple, dent or ding? Shopping carts, the doors of other vehicles and reckless kids can be a huge menace to the bodies of our cars. Parking spaces have been stripped way too small and grocery carts seem to have a mind of their own. On top of both, there are just a whole lot of reckless people out there. We can park in the most remote parts of the parking lots but let's face it; there is almost no way to avoid it. If it hasn't happened to you yet, I have BAD NEWS for you, it will!

Are you ready for the GOOD NEWS? Technology has advanced in such a way that expensive body repair and paint are no longer always necessary for these minor imperfections. A service called PDR, or paintless dent removal, has taken huge strides in advancing its methods making it a popular approach to eliminating these unsightly flaws. It's an affordable alternative for the removal of dents and dings, while keeping the original paint in tact. And that is the exciting part! Because a vehicle with original paint maintains a much higher value than a vehicle that has been repainted, or even just touched up.

How Is It Done?

Depending on the location of the damage, the panel is accessed through window openings, removing trim pieces, or removing inner panels. After accessing the appropriate area, Stan and his team of technicians use specialized tools and techniques to slowly massage the metal around the outside edge of the dent back into its original shape.
